

Call stipends while on out-of-region electives

Resident physicians on an out-of-region elective may claim on-call stipends if the following conditions are met:

1. The site that the resident physician is visiting is affiliated with the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada, or the College of Family Physicians of Canada, and their home university.
2. The site must be in Canada.
3. The elective is an education component that is supported by the program.
4. Exceptions may be considered on a case-by-case basis if the required educational component is not offered at a site with affiliations. Paperwork required will be at the discretion of the resident physician's home program.

For an acceptable elective, resident physicians need to bring their elective call schedule to their home program, preferably with the signature of a supervisor to verify that the schedule is accurate. The program administrator or individual normally responsible for submitting the timesheet for the home program would then submit a new timesheet labeled with the location of the elective ("Yellowknife Rotation" for instance).
